The study attempts a discourse analytic approach to the language of the conversations of the internet most famous and most popular chat program "internet relay chat" or "IRC". As a synchronous mode of computer mediated communication, language in IRC as it shows features of written and spoken discourse, and features that are specific to electronic discourse as abbreviation s and emoticons.