Abstract:

This paper deals with the texts on a collection of hieratic docketts written in black ink. These docketts are now in the National Museum of Egyptian Civilization at Cairo, and they were excavated by E. Bresciani in the 1970s at Tuthmosis's IV temple in Gurna – Thebes. All texts are wine jar docketts. According to the paleography, formula and content, the docketts date to the 18th dynasty, particularly the reign of the king Amenhotep III, and they are comparable with similar docketts from Malkata.
