

One of the methods of linguistic employment for verbal teams in distorting Qur'anic structures morphological, grammatical and semantic study

Abstract :

This research deals with some of the methods of linguistic employment with the verbal teams in distorting structures, using grammar and morphology as two tools for this distortion, which necessarily produced a change in the semantics, to conform to a doctrine or belief. , and they were not confined to distorting the morphological structure of the word, such as changing the movement of the building or adding a letter in the structure, but they expanded to structural distortions by addition and substitution, so they entered the object with it for a verb whose object had been omitted in short, and they inserted a semi-sentence to relate to a previous verb or its likeness, and they changed some letters of meanings. ... Thus, and in the conclusion, the research presented the most important results and some of these combined methods, and the reasons that led them to distort and change the structure.

Keywords: linguistic employment - verbal difference - distortion - Quranic structure