Abstract

The research in the literature that highlights the grammatical dispute is very significant because it indicates the different methods of grammarians and their reasoning in supporting their opinions, and analyzing controversial issues in general and morphological grammar in particular facilitates the researcher's development of his or her scientific and research personality. In this research, I've been interested in gathering the opinions of Sheikh Al-Islam Zakaria Al-Ansari regarding the various grammatical sections. Whether he explicitly stated the word weighting or not, he only mentioned its indications in a footnote on Ibn Al-Nazim's explanation of the millennium, which was labeled with "Sunni pearls," and as a result, this study of the Sheikh's opinions reveals a significant aspect of the great scientist among Arabic scholars and one of its imams.
