

The effectiveness of a professional intervention program in the general practice of social work to develop mothers' awareness of the requirements of social protection for children from trafficking

The issue of human trafficking represents a grave violation of human rights and dignity, and many describe it as the contemporary form of the issue of slavery, where hundreds of thousands of women, children and men are subjected annually to worldwide trafficking for the purpose of exploitation.

Objectives of the study :

- 1- Measuring the return of professional intervention in the general practice of social work in developing mothers' awareness of the requirements of social protection for children from trafficking.
- 2- Reaching a codified program of professional intervention for the general practice of social work to develop mothers' awareness of the requirements of social protection for children from trafficking after designing, experimenting and modifying the intervention program according to the results of the study and the process of quantitative and qualitative analysis of the data.

Study questions:

The study problem can be formulated in the form of a main question: "What is the effectiveness of the professional intervention program in the general practice of social work in developing mothers' awareness of the requirements of social protection for children from trafficking?"

From this main question, the following sub-questions are derived:

- 1- What is the effectiveness of the professional intervention program in the general practice of social work in developing mothers' awareness of the requirements of social protection for children from trafficking? "
- 2- What is the effectiveness of the professional intervention program in the general practice of social work in developing mothers' awareness of the requirements of economic protection for children from trafficking? "
- 3- What is the effectiveness of the professional intervention program in the general practice of social work in developing mothers' awareness of the requirements of health protection for children from trafficking? "

The study concluded that the professional intervention program has succeeded in developing mothers' awareness of the requirements of social protection for children from trafficking, and this was helped by the use of strategies, tactics and roles, which makes us suggest that it is a codified program for professional intervention for the general practice of social work to develop mothers' awareness of the requirements of social protection for children from trafficking, according to the results of the results. The study and the process of quantitative and qualitative analysis of data.
