Research Summary

The social worker is considered one of the elements of team work in special education schools (intellectual education - light for the blind - hope for the hard of hearing and deaf). It matches the specifications of the graduate who is needed by the labor market. His professional competencies need only a permanent development process that keeps pace with modern scientific and practical developments in the field of education in general and the field of caring for special groups in particular, so that he has the ability to face future challenges. The results of the study concluded that social workers have a desire to learn all that is new in the field of professional practice to benefit from modern scientific models and trends of social service in the field of special groups through conferences or scientific meetings that are held periodically, and social workers are invited to take advantage of these Modern knowledge and converting it into professional competencies Provide an appropriate school activities environment for these students
