

Faculty of Social Work

Department of Social Work Fields

Social service mechanisms to promote the culture of preventive health using the
.time cataclysms network model

Preparation

Dr. Hakima Rajab Ali Zidan

Teacher at the Faculty of Social Work

Fayoum University

Hrz00@fayoum.edu.eg

Journal of the Faculty of Social Work for Studies and Social Research - Fayoum University. Issue 19, Volume 1. April 2020

Abstract

The aim of this research is to achieve excellence in the performance of the social work profession, and to enhance its preventive role in times of health scandals, to advance the level of preventive services, by accelerating the pace of implementation of professional activities and programs that serve the social side affected by these pandemics and activating the mechanisms for implementing this emergency preventive role to face challenges Creating solutions and contributing to implementation.

And through the application of a questionnaire for "the role of preventive social work in times of health scandal" consisting of three main dimensions that represent the dimensions of preventive culture in times of health scandals and are: preparedness for effective response, effective communication, social recovery from the pandemic, those dimensions consist of (38 A phrase, related to the main dimensions referred to that translate the role of social service in times of health scandal. To achieve the goals of the study, the researcher used the quantitative and qualitative method in the analysis. The most important results of the study were as follows: Attention to community awareness through rational media that provides facts without intimidation or understatement. And, at the appropriate time, forming a team to deal with crises. Preparing models (scenarios) for what might happen from crises. Implementing crisis management training for different levels of management during regular periods.

The study concluded a number of recommendations, the most important of which were: activating the role of disaster and crisis management units in Egyptian universities and linking them to the social medical work sector in the Ministry of Health so that they could have an effective role in developing plans and studies necessary to face such epidemic pandemics., And work to find support And funding for urgent scientific research and studies that are concerned with studying social behavior in times of pandemics and emergency crises, and benefiting from its results in promoting preventive culture for members of society.