Social volunteer work has become considered one of the main pillars for achieving social progress for development and a criterion for measuring the level of social advancement of individuals. A spacious space for community members to practice their loyalty and affiliation, and social work represents an important field for refining individuals' skills and building their capabilities.

Proceeding from the relationship between social work and the human resource, it can be said that the mainstay of the human resource practicing social work are the youth, especially in artistic societies. Which they will be in dire need of, especially in the stage of their formation and the stage of their practical life.

Most of the modern trends in social sciences focus on the importance of studying youth trends, their problems, their values and their basic role in society. The social, economic and political in which those phenomena related to youth are studied.

Through previous studies, whether Arab or foreign alike, the importance of voluntary work within voluntary associations becomes clear that it has a positive role that is reflected on the community and its members, especially the youth groups. Therefore, the problem of the study lies in the importance of reaching the obstacles to community participation for young people in voluntary associations, with the development of a proposed vision to confront these obstacles from the perspective of the method of community organization.
