

Summary Search

(relations between civil society organizations to implement integrated management of water resources management in Fayoum Governorate) (2008)

Prepare

Dr / Wafaa Yousri Ibrahim - Assistant Professor - Department of Development and Planning - College of Social Work - Fayoum University

Annual Academic Conference XIX - Fayoum University - Faculty of Social Work - 23 to 24 April 2008)

The water management policies within the main mechanisms by which the implementation of the integrated management of water resources in the process and use that integrated management of water resources, mechanisms and multiple choices, for their relevance to the integrated management, and not just the development of water resources, all of which are by society organizations, government and private cooperation civil society organizations, including the links, associations and water boards and the participation of all individuals and groups in society, especially women.

Second: - The objectives of the study:-

- 1 - Description and identification of problems related to water resources management in the village.
- 2 - Description and determine the causes of problems related to water resources management in the village.
- 3 - Description and identification of mechanisms and ways of dealing with problems related to water resources management in the village.
- 4 - Description and identify the foundations and the philosophy and principles of application of integrated management of water resources in the village.
- 5 - Exit indicators enrich the social service Majaltha different and contribute to the development and planning of water resources in the village.

Study and descriptive analysis the researcher used the measure to be applied to (47) of grass-roots leadership, (35) of Executive Leadership, (33) of young people volunteer to work in development projects and programs were taking their views and representatives stressed that the villages facing many problems that are related to water resources (health , social, family, community, problems associated with rural women and the problems of irrigation water to villages and study focused on the causes and resolution mechanisms and methods available to address these problems and dealt with the foundations Taattbaiq approach to integrated management.

Suggestions and general recommendations

- 1 - increase the efficiency of surface irrigation and reduce water losses.
- 2 - fair distribution of irrigation water to farmers and the optimal use of water.
- 3 - Reduce the cost of irrigation to farmers and increase agricultural productivity.
- 4 - increase the effectiveness of the farmers in the maintenance of Msaekayam and participation in the maintenance of canals.
- 5 - including distribution and raise the efficiency of the water system and reduce the burden on the government.
- 6 - Easy to deal with the water users associations in the case of water problems or technical compared to dealing with each farmer individually.
- 7 - the prelude to the farmers a greater role in future water resource management at the local level and not inconsistent with the rule of the government on the water resource.
- 8 - Monitoring and follow-up to the problems of drinking water through periodic sampling of reservoirs, and do Pthaliha to make sure that the required health standards.
- 9 - The presence of the results of realistic and very accurate and gives an indication honest about that the water from pollution or not scientifically accurate
- 10 - the fight against poverty to absorb a large amount of labor,
- 11 - The importance of the research to develop and improve the level of production in any area of life.