Since the beginning of the nineties, the Egyptian society has witnessed many economic, social and political changes, and in light of these changes and the consequent emergence of many societal problems, and among these problems (the problem of homeless children), where children are considered the basis of the nation, if they rise, the nation rises, and the problem of homeless children is a phenomenon It is global and spread all over the world, and it is also one of the most dangerous problems that threaten the security of society, as it is like a time bomb that threatens social life, and these children become vulnerable to exploitation and delinquency and become an idle force that consumes and does not produce, so it becomes a missing human force, and given the importance of this category in society and its danger and increasing size and problems Therefore, we find that there is a group of children who live in difficult conditions and are subject to deprivation of social care services. To compensate them for the family care that they lacked, the community initiated the establishment of civil institutions to care for this group and provides them with various forms of comprehensive social care services for them as individuals who have all rights in Therefore, many NGOs seek to provide many services and programs For these children and transforming them into productive energies that seek the development process. Hence, this study came to determine the planning requirements necessary to provide social care services for homeless children in NGOs to obtain services, in order to develop a proposed vision for planning to activate the role of NGOs in providing social care services to homeless children.
