Proceeding from the primary goal of social service in the development of societies, by searching for the various forces and factors that prevent growth and social progress, such as deprivation, unemployment, disease and poor living conditions that are outside the scope of the ability of individuals who suffer from them, and that work on their misery as well as looking for reasons ills in society. In order to address and combat these causes and select the most appropriate and effective means in society to eliminate them or reduce their effects and the damages that result from them to the lowest possible extent.

The labor social service, which includes a group of efforts performed by social workers in the labor fields, with the aim of increasing workers' compatibility with the work environment and responsibilities, to raise production efficiency in quantity and quality by improving work relations between the two parties to production, and satisfying basic needs and securing them health, social and economic for workers through efforts. Technical carried out by professional specialists.

In order to achieve this, it was necessary to identify and analyze social welfare policies for workers in light of societal changes and various trends and transformations by the state so that we can develop a policy commensurate with those changes to achieve the greatest possible social care for workers by reviewing its legislation and regulations on an ongoing basis to ensure its success. in achieving its objectives.

Whereas, through analysis, we can describe and estimate the impact of social policy and the factors associated with that impact for the purpose of amending, reforming, changing, maintaining, or proposing alternative policies in order to achieve a better level of societal goals related to social care services in their comprehensive concept.
