

Requirements for achieving social protection to reduce child labor in slum areas

Research Summary;

The aim of the research is to know the requirements for achieving social protection to reduce child labor in slum areas, as the problem of child labor represents a great danger to society, as children are the youth of tomorrow, and child labor has many risks for the child, as the working child is exposed to many physical, psychological and social problems that appear. Problems when the child reaches puberty and youth. Accordingly, a questionnaire form was applied to workers in civil society organizations, and the title of the form was "Requirements for achieving social protection to reduce child labor in slum areas." It consists of three sub-dimensions: the role of civil society organizations in developing intellectual awareness among poor families in slum areas in order to reduce Child labor.

-The role of civil society organizations in supporting educational services for children in slum areas in order to reduce their employment. -The role of civil society organizations in improving the economic situation of poor families in slum areas in order to reduce their employment. These dimensions consist of (22) statements. To achieve the objectives of the study, the researcher used the quantitative and qualitative approach in analyzing and interpreting the research results. The research reached a set of results, the most prominent of which was the existence of an effective role for civil society organizations in providing social protection for children in order to reduce their employment.

Keywords (child labor – social protection – slum areas)